

Who is Brandon Williamson?

Brandon Williamson is a Creativity consultant, workshop developer and Creative Problem solving Facilitator who works in the Office of Admissions at Fredonia State University of New York. He is also the founder and creator of the internationally recognized and nationally top 10 ranked Pure Ink Poetry Slam in Buffalo, NY. With experience serving as a high school teacher, advisor to groups like the Fredonia black student Union, Minister, Poet, Actor, Musician, Author, Athlete, Producer, community activist, and innovator, Brandon has a great understanding of the complexities of perspective in business. He is trained to conduct creative problem solving facilitations for corporate, not-for-profit organizations, businesses, athletic organizations, student associations and groups, youth groups, after- school programs, educational institutions, and community organizations. Brandon travels from Buffalo, to the Hudson Valley, and the Capitol region of New York State presenting to high school students the importance of education and choosing the path for the future they desire.

As a creativity consultant, Brandon has facilitated workshops for organizations including Fredonia Student Affairs, State University of New York Conference for Admissions Professionals, SUNY Fredonia Center for Multicultural Affairs, Minorities in Criminal Justice, Buffalo State Residence hall association, various colleges and high schools in the greater Buffalo area, and the province of Ontario Canada.

Brandon is fully trained in the art of Theater and has adopted a style of innovative, interactive style of presentation called DramaTeach. Brandon has utilized this teaching technique during his years of teaching inner-city high school students in the Western New York community. He has run youth based workshops in the Western New York area, in Dallas, Texas, Niagara Falls, Oakland Ca, and various other locations. This innovation in performance and engagement brings unique dimensions to his presentation and workshops that are not to be missed.

Brandon is a former member of the Emerging Leaders of the Arts in Buffalo, Poetry Slam Incorporated, Innovative disrupters, and current President of the Ujima Theater Company. He holds a Bachelor in Theatre Arts from Fredonia State University of New York with a minor in Philosophy, and a Masters of Science degree in Creativity from the International Center of Applied Imagination at Buffalo State College.
